

The Stories

Contributed by Paul Merchant
Thursday, 03 August 2006

What makes a production with Biography Films different from a home movie or one of those popular slide shows with music? Our equipment and high production values help to set us apart, but the biggest difference is that we get people to tell their stories on camera.

It's the stories that give us insight into the personalities behind them. The stories are what bring out the laughter and the tears. Through the stories, simple lessons of wisdom are passed from one generation to another. And, with a personal biography, these stories will never be forgotten. Magic happens when music and photo effects are added to one of our productions, but the heart of every biography we make is the stories themselves. Our ability to capture people telling stories on camera may not be as uncanny as it seems. The process flows naturally when the equipment is carefully set up, the filmmaker is professional and kind, and when someone has shown that they cared enough about these stories to hire us.